Q: Devise and Strapi have two different sessions Using Strapi, I have a form where the user should be able to login, since I am using this page to register and login both... I want my signup and login to be two different sessions. The problem is that when my code is executed, I have two completely different sessions. When I sign up, the user is recognized, and when I log in, the API is correctly recognized. This is my code Rails.application.routes.draw do scope "(:locale)" do mount Rack::Session::Middleware, at: "/" devise_for :users, controllers: {registrations:'registrations'} resources :users, except: [:new, :create] resources :users, except: [:new, :create] end get 'auth/:provider/callback' => 'auth#index', as: :callback get 'auth/failure' => 'auth#failure' get 'users/login' => 'users#login' root 'pages#home' get 'dashboard' => 'pages#dashboard' end # The priority is based upon order of creation: first created -> highest # priority. ## See how all your routes lay out with "rake routes". # This is a priority set

Liyu SC631 Series Driver Free Category:Plotters Category:Laser printers9.04.2015 And so this year at the office Christmas party, I decided to wear the YSL Big Flab Bandeau at lunch. The top is two-tier, with a so-soft and full lining, and it's on quite long. It covered my chest comfortably, and I hoped that everyone will give me a compliment because of the hoochie shape. Do I look too overweight or something? Ok, I'm going to lay down a little right now. I'm already expecting to receive many compliments about the sexy look. But you guys, I've been on a diet for a long time. That's why I'm not carrying too many things, and I also not been eating too much lately (although what I've been eating is mostly unhealthy). I'm also working out really hard every day, and I think I might be too skinny. So this might be all that I've been seeing on the mirror lately. So please, forget about me being overweight. Update: My friends are actually all amazed by the YSL Big Flab Bandeau. I feel like a sexy lady. The red was later gone. It's been replaced by the very hot pink in the picture below. My ultimate goal to have a lil pair of YSL Big Flab Bandeau. But honestly, I didn't look too bad in it. I did wear the YSL Big Flab Bandeau on top of my regular YSL Big Flab Corset. It was nice to have the YSL Big Flab Corset as a barrier to keep my beautiful bust out of sight. My wish was just a lil pair of YSL Big Flab Bandeau, but I felt that the long ones were just too long for me. I didn't really like the long YSL Big Flab Corset either. It was too tight for me, and it made my already tiny bust expand too much. This summer, I also got the chance to try the YSL 1678ea99e
